Written by Marco Attard
30 September 2016

European cloud infrastructure provider Interxion announces expansion plans in 3 cities-- it will open an 11th datacentre in Frankfurt, as well as expand facilities in Paris and Marseilles.

Dubbed FRA11, the Frankfurt Interxion facility covers 4800 square metres and will built in 4 phases. The first 2 phases, named FRA10, will open in Q4 2017, followed by phases 3 and 4 in Q2 2018. The facility is to cost €95 million.

Meanwhile the Paris facility will gain an additional 1000 square metres of space, making 2100 in total. A 500 square metre portion will open on Q4 2016 before the rest is finalised by Q2 2017. The Marseilles datacentre gets 1400 square metres of more space scheduled to open in Q2 2017, for a total expenditure of €23m and €20m going towards Paris and Marseilles respectively.

“Improving market dynamics in Europe are driving demand for colocation services across multiple segments and multiple countries, and Interxion continues to invest in new projects to expand our footprint in the cities where our customer orders exceed our existing capacity,” the company says. “As a result, we are increasing our capital expenditure guidance to support order-driven expansions in these important markets in Europe.”

Go Interxion to Expand in Frankfurt, Paris and Marseilles