Social Collaboration over the Cloud

Written by Marco Attard
07 April 2011

Novell launches Vibe Cloud, its first real-time web-based social enterprise collaboration platform.

The service comes in 2 versions-- basic and enterprise (with additional security features, management controls and premium support).

The enterprise version also increases the storage limit from 250 MB/user to 5GB, while providing enterprise ownership of all data stored across users' groups in their domain.

Vibe cloud combines real-time co-authoring, social messaging and file sharing with a secure IT environment, allowing for users across organisations to work together while maintaining enterprise security policies.

It integrates with any email client through standard protocols, allowing users to bring a partner or customer into the platform by using their email address.

Go Novell Vibe Cloud